Invitation Letter

Dear Guests, Fellow Educators, and International Camp Partners,
Greetings!

As autumn settles over Qilu, our mountains and lakes await your arrival. We cordially invite you to gather in Shandong this November for the 13th International Camping Congress - Qilu Venue.

Under the theme "GATHER TOGETHER, GROW TOGETHER", this venue brings together camp leaders, scholars, and education experts from over 20 countries for in-depth dialogues around holistic education ecosystems. Together, we will explore how corporate strengths and school education can synergize to make camp education a vital bridge connecting families, schools, and society—integrating the transformative power of education into the daily growth of youth.

We have prepared this Pre-Departure Guide covering the schedule, ground transportation, weather & clothing tips, and camp service details. We look forward to engaging in inspiring exchanges with you amid the autumn hills and lakes, unlocking endless possibilities for camp education!

2.3 Travel Routes

[Transportation & Shuttle Arrangements]

The primary transportation hubs for this event are Qingdao Jiaodong International Airport (TAO) and Weifang North Railway Station, both offering the fastest transfers and arrivals from major global cities. We have outlined the following three preferred travel routes for our partners:

Primary Route: Fly directly to Qingdao Jiaodong International Airport (TAO). Offering extensive flight coverage, this airport is the recommended arrival point for the event.

Beijing Transfer (Air/Rail): If direct flights from your origin city are limited, we suggest flying into Beijing Capital International Airport (PEK) first. From there, you can either transfer to a domestic flight to Qingdao or take a direct high-speed train to Weifang.

Beijing Daxing Alternative (Rail): If you arrive at Beijing Daxing International Airport (PKX), you will need to transfer to a high-speed train bound for Weifang.

Whether you fly into Qingdao Jiaodong International Airport or arrive via high-speed train at Weifang Station, our hospitality team will be waiting at the designated exit gates to provide dedicated shuttle services, ensuring a seamless and worry-free journey.

III. Internet & Payment

3.1 Physical SIM Card (Recommended Option)

- Where to Purchase: Telecom counters (China Mobile, China Unicom, China Telecom) in airport arrival halls or downtown outlets (typically open 6:00–24:00).
- Requirements: Original Passport for real-name face-verification registration.
- Advantages: Provides a +86 Mainland China phone number to register for WeChat, Alipay, and DiDi, and to receive SMS verification codes.

Note: Mainland China SIM cards cannot directly access overseas apps like Google, Instagram, or WhatsApp.

3.2 eSIM

Ideal for short stays or those needing uninterrupted access to overseas apps.

- Where to Purchase: Buy online before departure via Ubigi, Trip.com, Klook, etc., and scan to activate upon arrival.
- Features: Uses international routing nodes to access overseas apps smoothly; usually does not include a +86 mobile number.

Tip: Recommended to use alongside your home country's physical SIM card.

3.3 Payment Methods

Mobile Payment (Primary Method): Both Alipay and WeChat Pay support linking international bank cards (Visa, Mastercard, Amex, JCB, etc.).

1.Alipay Setup: Download App → Register with international phone number → Upload passport for real-name verification → Add overseas bank card under "Cards".

2.WeChat Setup: Download WeChat → Me → Services & Pay → Wallet → Cards → Add overseas bank card.

Cash (Backup): We recommend carrying around RMB 300 in cash, preferably in small denominations (10, 20, or 50 RMB). Currency exchange is available at airports, banks, and hotels, or via ATMs supporting international cards.

Credit Cards: Major shopping malls, hotels, and airports widely accept Visa, Mastercard, and UnionPay. Small vendors, buses, and subways generally do not accept physical international credit cards.

3.4 Key Operational Checklist

- 1.Obtain your SIM card / activate your eSIM BEFORE linking WeChat Pay or Alipay, as bank verification requires SMS codes.
- 2.Test your mobile payment with a small purchase at an airport convenience store upon arrival.
